er the Condition of Brick Paved Streets in Cleveland

eets Paved a Few Months Ago showing the Effects of Heavy Teaming

That the people who live on ck paved streets, says the Cleve-d Press of yesterday, are thorough-alarmed at the condition of their veral thoroughfares is shown by e number of kicks fired at the City ll There has never been any eck placed on heavy teaming in is city, and yet Cleveland has ch more brick pavement than any her city in the country

Brick pavements are comparatively cheap, and are laid where the ople cannot afford more expensive aterial Pavements laid as late as t fall show the effects of heavy aming, and on Dorchester avenue, ach and Detroit streets the life is ing knocked out of the pavements The information contained in the ove, coming as it does from a city ich has all kinds of street paving, ould be considered very valuable pecially when Lima is about to emrk in the paving business, and the uncil should proceed carefully if it ust be brick

Nine-tenths of the advocates of ick in Lima are such because they ve been talked into it by persons terested in the sale of, and have t investigated the question of pav g

The main argument of the brick vocates is that brick will wear the st, and for that reason they want on the Square on account of heavy auling there Brick streets are not anding up beneath heavy hauling Dayton, Cleveland, Ft Wayne or y other city except on streets pre ared expressly to exhibit to visiting uncil delegations

Lima's venture will cost about 0,000 Other cities have paid for eir experience This being the se, shall Lima profit thereby or unge ahead and go through the me experience of other towns here is no need of it when the re ult has always been the same in ery instance Street paving will ear the same in Lima as in other ces No worse No better Wh en expend $30,000 or $50,000 in tting experience

No Report Yet on the Tariff Bill.

THE REASONS KEPT SECRET.

Conferees Consult With the Cabinet and the President, but Nothing Definite Reached—Further Time Will Be Necessary For the Completion of the Bill Senate and House Proceedings.

WASHINGTON Aug 10—The Democratic conference committee adjourned shortly after noon, and both sides reported that no agreement had been reached As soon as the members left the committee room Professor Wilson and Cliff Breckinridge of Arkansas although not a member of the committee, but who has been attending in an advisory position left the Capitol and drove at once to the White House and reported the muddled state of affairs to the president

Vest and Jones of the senate went at once to the president's room in the senate wing, where Gorman was waiting for him. While the conference was going on a messenger was sent out for Senator Smith of New Jersey and there the startling discovery was made that Smith was kicking and in a bad humor, and absolutely refused to come to the Capitol It was given out at his hotel that he was ill and would not be able to go out of his room

When this news was given to Senator Gorman he immediately left the room and went in search of Senator Smith and found him in his hotel room in dishabille and absolutely refused to listen to the entreaties to come to the Capitol Meanwhile Senator Murphy went in to see the senate conferrees, and talked over the situation with them and told them that no coal and iron both were agreed to, the bill would be killed.

As soon as Gorman returned from the fruitless errand after Senator Smith he was closeted with Senator Aldrich, and it is stated on the best authority that the result of the two conferences was that it is likely that a motion will be made in the senate within the next 24 hours to discharge the conference committee and to postpone indefinitely the tariff bill

The Republicans claim that there will be five Democratic votes with the full Republican vote to carry this motion

In the House

WASHINGTON Aug 10—In the house Mr Boutelle speaking to a question of personal privilege denied a published imputation that he had introduced for political purposes resolutions recognizing the Hawaiian republic Referring to the president's recognition of the republic, he was describing how Secretary Gresham had snubbed up to the Capitol Wednesday to inform Chairman McCreary of the administration's purpose when he was called to order by Mr Quigg and warned by the speaker Mr Boutelle denounced the conduct of the administration in the Hawaiian affair as "peanut politics."

OFF A HIGH BRIDGE.

Disastrous Wreck on the Rock Island Railroad.

EIGHT PEOPLE WERE KILLED

In Addition to Those There Were Several Injured—It Is Believed That the Work of the Wreck Was Due to Trainwreckers—The Wreck Takes Fire and Some of the Victims Are Burned

LINCOLN, Neb Aug 10—One of the worst railroad wrecks in this section in years occurred shortly after 10 o'clock last night The northbound Rock Island passenger train went off a high bridge four or five miles south of the city Eight people are known to be killed and several injured It was a local train consisting of engine, tender, baggage smoking car and coach The engine and combination car went over the bridge, leaving the coach and suspended in the trestle Two passengers and a brakeman of the end coach were not injured They managed to release two others.

The killed are Conductor C D Stanford Engineer Ike Depew, fireman name unknown, three traveling men and two farmers names unknown

The injured are F F Scott expressman C D Sherrer, mail clerk, L S Bell of Lincoln, traveling man

About 12 others were injured, but their names are not yet known

In response to a telephone message from the station in the vicinity of the wreck a party of physicians police and fire department went to the scene and rendered all assistance possible

Colonel Bills of the Second regiment was one of the passengers but escaped unhurt Henry C Brown of Colonel Bills the brakeman was the only one of the crew who escaped unhurt His story and that of the others whom survive indicates the wreck was due to the work of trainwreckers, and Walter Seidell who lives near the crossing and was the first one on the scene states positively and further with which it had been wrecked Loose were found near the trestle after the wreck occurred

No 8 was due at Lincoln at 10 10 and was proceeding along at a lively gait when the trestle was reached There were about 15 passengers in the charcar all of whom were got out more or less injured In the sleeper there were 10 or 12 and it is not thought a single one escaped

When the engine struck the broken rail she jumped the track and, bounding along over the next three hundred feet rolled to one side and plunged down on the Union Pacific tracks below followed by the other three cars

The brakemen tells this story I know the trouble was in the smoker and rushed forward to see what I could do when the plunge came It was a sickening sight The car was a shapeless mass of broken pieces and wreckage and I could see the crushed and mangled bodies of the passengers in the debris By this time help had arrived and we got out the baggageman and mail man The baggageman was terribly injured He was squeezed between broken timbers and begging piteously for some one to save him from the flames which were rapidly eating their way toward him

The rescuers worked frantically with saws and axes while the hot breath of the approaching flames scorched their hands and faces When relased the flames were within three inches of the man's head The engineer and fireman were found crushed under the engine which was turned upside down In the midst of the excitement the brakeman had presence of mind enough to send men out to flag a freight train following on the Rock Island and another approaching on the Burlington and Missouri He also sent to the penitentiary for assistance and from there the fire department was notified The chemical was soon on the ground but could do no good, and every vestige of the burning bridge was soon reduced to a heap of smoking ruins

The train where the wreck occurred is about two miles south of the penitentiary or five miles from the city It was about 300 feet long and 60 feet high, and it carried the Rock Island track over both the Burlington and Missouri and Union Pacific

Mr Walker came to the city last evening and had a prescription containing tartaric acid and other ingredients filled at a drugstore It was designed to be mixed with water and used as a cooling summer drink

On arriving home, Mr Walker immediately prepared a pitcher of the beverage and the family at once began partaking Shortly afterward the children were taken sick and in less than an hour the whole family were in an unconscious condition By chance Mrs Gardner, a neighbor, happened to call at the Walker residence where she found the family lying on the floor in an unconscious condition

A messenger was immediately dispatched to the city who called Dr Patterson The doctors arrival at the house found the family all and in a very precarious condition Everything possible was done to relieve them but it was impossible to save the lives of three, and it is by no means certain that any will recover No fault can be found with the druggist as the trouble seems to have been with the quantity of acid used

The people had been made defiant by the inflammatory speeches at the mass-meeting on Wednesday, and when the small squad of police that had been sent there early in the evening tried to peaceably disperse the crowds that collected on the sidewalks they resisted Later squads of from 30 to 40 people came from all directions and gathered on the triangle

C D Coles chairman of the state Democratic central committee, drifted in from Lima last night, says the Mansfield News It was thought at first that he had come on a political mission but he really came in his official capacity of United States bank examiner to make the regular examination of the Citizens' National bank This duty he dispatched this morning and this afternoon he will devote his leisure to politics, particularly, for a chat with Chairman Seward of the state executive committee

Mr Coles is one of those suave genial gentlemen one naturally likes to meet His face is something after the Bill Nye type, and his smile is chilklike and bland, yet withal pleasant Mr Coles chatted a few minutes with a News reporter He said that the meeting of the state Democratic committee was deferred until late because the people have too much politics, and by having a late convention the campaign will be shorter and sharper He says he can see from the condition of banks that times are getting better deposits are larger, there is more of a demand for money and the banks are not carrying such a large reserve fund as they did during the panic He does not guess will pass some kind of a tariff bill soon Any kind of a tariff bill will be preferable to the McKinley bill, he said

Prof Hicks, the weather prophet has this to say about the August storm periods 'August will open with a storm period in progress, intensified by new moon on the 1st Thunder and much severe bluster, with more or less rain will result about 1st and 2d especially north and east If the great heat prevailing is not abated by these disturbances, or about the reactionary 5th and 6th the crisis of summer heat will be reached, and will culminate in severe electrical and wind storms between the 8th and 13th The 16th and 17th are dates on and about which storm flurries will appear, bringing local rains, and help ing to mitigate the heat The 21st to 24th being a regular storm period, will further tend to check the heat and drought Storms of much energy will likely appear and cooler nights will follow On the 30th falls August's second new moon, and being in a reactionary period, promises more heat—some hard storms and earthquakes Watch the 26th, 30th and 31st

The Gazette Intimates that One is Needed for the One Republican County Commissioner

A few weeks ago when the Democratic board of county commissioners reduced the tax levy so that the county had been saved about $25,000 in taxes during the year the editor of the Lima Gazette made the stupid allegation that A J Osman, the Republican member of the board was responsible for it—that his induction into the board had brought about the decrease The position taken by the Gazette was so ridiculous to those who knew Osman that that paper was forced to retreat, and it now, in this morning's edition, not only admits its error, but openly charges Jim with so great a measure of incompetency as to be incapable of looking after that portion of the county within his own district, for which he draws his per diem and expenses with such great regularity The Republican Gazette openly states that it is necessary for the Democratic members of the Board of Commissioners to go with Osman into his district and give their personal supervision to the work he is paid for doing It is only by such supervision, the Gazette implies that Osman can be prevented from wasting the people's money by his stupid blunders Now while it is conceded by all that the Democratic members of the Board of Commissioners are very competent officials and perform their work with celerity and efficiency, it is certainly asking too much of them that they take on the burden of looking after the work of their Republican colleague in order to have his work performed with a reasonable degree of intelligence If Jim is not capable of performing the duties of the office to which he was accidently elected, the Republican party is responsible for it They might apply for a guardian to look after his public work, but they should not expect to saddle the work and responsibility on the other members of the Board and let their Moses draw full pay for his time

Three years of bitter experience proves the truth of Blaine's prediction that the enactment of the McKinley high protective tariff law would not open a foreign market for a barrel of American pork or a bushel of American wheat

The limited number of bidders on street paving demonstrates the evil of allowing the outer world to understand that the job is let ahead of the opening of the bids Once the people are impressed with the idea that the estimating on a piece of public work is merely a conventional proceeding in which they have no chance for success, they will not enter into competition, and a higher ruling of bids follows

A New York paper insists that one of the Chinese war vessels is named Gin Sling No one need be surprised if this ship follows the example of the Kow Shung and goes down

Two representatives of Baring Bros, the London bankers, have just arrived in this country to look after their customers' interest in the Atchison railroad The house appears to be unfortunate in its investments Four years ago it sent a messenger to Argentine to look the stable door, and found that the horse was gone A similar experience awaits them in this country, if half the reports about the Atchison management prove true

Professor Washington himself a colored man, declares in the Christian Register that 'any colored man with common sense a reasonable education and business ability can take $1000 in cash and go into any Southern community and in five years be worth $5000 He does not meet with that stern, relentless competition that he encounters when he butts up against the Northern Yankee The black man can sooner conquer Southern prejudice than Northern competition"

Recent statistics show that the annual increase of anthracite coal production in Pennsylvania for a long term of years is about 1,500,000 tons Other comparative figures show that during the same period of time miners wages have steadily decreased and the cost of coal to the consumers increased Here is a condition upon which economists may found arguments, and which in long weary time may call forth action on the part of the often "whipsawed" but always patient public

Speaking of his resolution instructing the House Committee on Ways and Means to report a bill for an income tax that will produce $100,000 000 annually, and a bill placing all sugar on the free list, Representative Bland said "If tariff legislation is defeated, and it now looks as though it might be the tariff reformers will take a new line in the direction of my resolution I am determined, if we can not have tariff reform, that the trusts at all events shall pay into the Treasury a fair share of their enormous profits That would benefit the people indirectly even if they fail to secure the reduction on the necessaries of life that they demand I know that the bills proposed by my resolutions would pass the House and I believe that they would get through the Senate

As Congress seems to be approaching a final disposition of the tariff, it may be of interest to recall its time record as compared with that of the previous Congress that passed the McKinley act That Congress began its sessions in December 1889, and it was September 10 1890, when the tariff bill passed the Senate On September 16 a conference was ordered and on September 26 an agreement was reached On the following day the bill, as amended in conference, was adopted in the House and on September 30 it was concurred in by the Senate This is only August 6, so that if a settlement be reached within the next few days the present Congress will still be seven weeks ahead of the Reed Congress in disposing of its most important measure, having already practically completed all its other business

A newspaper published in Leeds, England, thus marks historical record of the recent labor troubles in Chicago 'A big revolution is now going on in the United States and there is little doubt that the government will be defeated The dictator, Debs, has been driven from his palace and he and his ministers are now hiding in the mountains The greatest trouble has been experienced in the capital of Chicago, where Grover Cleveland, the leader of the rebels, has obtained complete control The railroad track at that place was torn up and thrown into the Mississippi river, a stream considerably longer than the Severn, and the Stockyards where the government palaces are situated, have been razed to the ground The trouble was started by a man named Pullman, who has a stronghold in the mountains of Illinois, one of the most considerable provinces of the country The man Pullman manufactures cattle cars

Private Letters Made Public

There has been much speculation over the appearance in the auction mart recently of private letters to prominent persons still living Thus nine letters from Motley, the American historian, to Bismarck were sold this week for $300 One was marked "private and confidential" and was addressed 'Dear Old Bismarck ' There is no doubt that these letters are genuine but the natural query is How did they get into the public market?—London Standard

A Novel of the New Style.

Its author says in her preface that "the masses" could not understand it in a thousand years We say 'her 'preface The novel is published anonymously But we think the writer is a woman from the aesthetic and extremely minute descriptions of a lady's wardrobe to be found in it Nothing is omitted And the reason the "masses" could not understand this sizzling hot love story is probably because its heroine takes away another woman's husband and justifies it on the score of her great gulping love for him That love now! It is a 90 horse power 17,000 candle, quadruple expansion affair A little thing like a man's having a wife and two children already, with whom hitherto he has always lived happily does not stand in the way of this Yosemite cataract of love for one single instant Not much! Queer too but it is exactly that kind of love the married man and the girl who isn't his wife always cherish for each other

The husband in this sizzling novel is mismated of course It is strange but somehow he always is He had been entangled in his green youth in spite of the fact that he seems to have knocked about the world considerably, by a woman older than himself entrapped, bamboozled and ensnared But being older than he was not the wife's only sin She had worked for her living before she married him It is true that the girl the husband fell in love with was doing that very thing when she first met him and the great gulping love took possession of both but this does not count His new girl had a 'haughty head covered with short auburn curls while the hair of the miserable creature who had married him was actually coarse But the wife's worst sin of all against her husband has yet to be told She never rubbed his hair! Let wives whose husbands find their slobbering soul ultimities in young ladies with haughty heads make a note of it

They love at first sight—the husband and the pretty girl He takes her for a carriage drive and in a paroxysm of innocent motion' he kisses her It mostly happens that way Thus the electric spark jumped from the trolley wire into the universal astral atmosphere, and equilibrium was restored

After that for a good while the sizzling lovers enjoyed themselves in their own way and she rubbed his hair right along Time went on At last it all seemed dry the woman whom she robbed of her husband and had course him got hold of a love letter the first girl had written to the husband It was of a temperature of about 2 00 F Not being the kind of hair oil her rival, the wife naturally inquired into matters She desired to see her rival In a scene of very high tragedy which has a tendency to make one of the masses who reads it smile a broad grin the meeting between the two females the husband and the course he pursued is depicted The exquisite feminine spite with which the final spoke of the wife to the woman will not be lost on the reader of this redhot tale

The final one, who evidently tells the story looks on the wife as a monster of cruelty and injustice because she will not then and there forgive both say blessing children and let her husband go along with his affinity thus storming for the deadly wrong she did the girl by marrying this inanimate passional attraction when she did not know the girl was in existence But the course hound monster would not give up the man it is said to feel Then there came a sea of troubles and a wild sloshing about for both The girl begged her affinity to give up his wife throw over his position as a great American statesman and run away with her all for love Naturally a great American married statesman however dead in love with the wrong girl he may be would hesitate before doing that

The girl feels bad because he will not give up all for love very bad indeed Another man falls in love with her an oldish philosopher who evidently has no passional attraction for the young woman but is just thrown in to fill up so to speak and to show what an irresistible creature the girl is But her heart pains to the other fellow still At length the cruel course of mixed wife relents and gives up her husband to her rival It is the most sensible thing anybody in the book does The soul affinities are married Put we will let a box of bonbons against a bottle of milk that that husband will find it all in the affinity before he is done with it

FROM THE RANKS.

By CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

[Copyright, 1894, by the J B Lippincott Co]

'No That's another thing that got me She smiled after him, all sweetness, and—well she did say 'I count upon you You'll be there,' and he nodded Oh she was bright as a button after that! '

'What did she mean? Be where' do you suppose? Stout this all means more to me and to us all than I can explain."

'I don't know I can't imagine.'

'Was it to see her again that night?'

I don't know at all If it was he fooled her, for he never went near her again Rollins put her in the carriage."

'Whose? Did she come with the Suttons?"

'Why, certainly I thought you knew that.'

'And neither old Mme Beaubien nor Mrs Sutton with them? What was the old squaw thinking of?"

By this time they had neared the guardhouse where several of the men were seated awaiting the call for the next relief All arose at the shout of the sentry on No 1 turning out the guard for the officer of the day Chester made hurried and impatient acknowledgment of the salute and called to the sergeant to send him the sentry who was at the bridge at 1 o clock. It turned out to be a young soldier who had enlisted at the post only six months before and was already known as one of the most intelligent and promising candidates for a corporalship in the garrison

'Were you on duty at the bridge at 1 o clock Carey?' asked the captain

'I was sir My relief went on at 11 15 and came off at 1 45 '

What persons passed your post during that time?

'There was a squad or two of men coming back from town on pass I halted them sir and Corporal Murray came down and passed them in '

I don't mean coming from town Who went the other way?'

Only one carriage sir—Mr Sutton's

'Could you see who were in it?'

Certainly sir It was right under the lamppost this end of the bridge that I stood when I challenged. Lieutenant Rollins answered for them and passed them out He was sitting beside Mr Sutton as they drove up then jumped out and gave me the countersign and bade them good night there.'

Rollins again ' thought Chester 'Why did he keep this from me?

Who were in the carriage' he asked

Mr Sutton sir on the front seat driving and two young ladies on the back seat

Nobody else?

Not as I could see sir it plain as day One lady was Miss Sutton and the other Mrs Beaubien I know I was surprised at seeing the latter because she drove home in her own carriage last evening, right after parade I was on post there at that hour too sir The second relief is on from 6 to 7 45 '

That will do Carey I see your relief is forming now

As the officers walked away and Sloat silently plodded along beside his dark browed senior the latter turned to him

I could say that there was no way in which Mr Troid could have gone townward last night Should not you?'

He might have crossed the bridge while the third relief was on and got a horse at the other side

He didn't do that Sloat I had already questioned the sentry on that relief It was the third that I inspected and visited this morning

Well, how do you know he wanted to go to town Why couldn't he have gone up the river or out to the range? Perhaps there was a little game of draw out at camp'

There was no light in camp much less a little game of draw after 11 o clock You know well enough that there is nothing of that kind going on with Games in command That is Jerrold's game even if those fellows were bent on running their eyesight and nerve and spoiling the chance of getting the men on the division and my teams I wish it were his game instead of what it is '

Still, Chester he may have been out in the country somewhere You seem bent on the conviction he was up to mischief here around this post I won't ask you what you mean but there's more than one way of getting to town if a man wants to very bad '

How' Of course he can take a skiff and row down the river but he'd never be back in time for reveille There goes 6 o clock and I must get home and shave and think this over Keep your own counsel no matter who asks you If you hear any questions or talk about shooting last night you know nothing, heard nothing and saw nothing "

Shooting last night? exclaimed Sloat all agog with eagerness and excitement now 'Where was it? Who was it?"

But Chester turned a deaf ear upon him and walked away He wanted to see Rollins and went straight home

'Why didn't you tell me Miss Beaubien was out here last night?' was the question he asked as soon as he had entered the room where, all aglow from his cold bath the youngster was dressing for breakfast He colored vividly, then laughed

Well you never gave me much chance to say anything did you? You talked all the time as I remember and suddenly vanished and slammed the door I would have told you had you asked me ' But all the same it was evident for the first time that here was a subject Rollins was shy of mentioning

'Did you go down and see them across sentry post?'

'Certainly Jerrold asked me to He said he had to take Miss Renwick home and was too tired to come back—was going to turn in I was glad to do any thing to be civil to the Suttons '

Why I'd like to know? They have never invited you to the house or shown you any attention whatever You are not their style at all Rollins, and I'm glad of it. It wasn't for their sake you stood there until 1 o clock instead of being here in bed I wish'—and he looked wistfully, enviously at his favorite now— I wish I could think it wasn't for the sake of Miss Beaubien's black eyes and aboriginal beauty '

'Look here captain,' said Rollins, with another flush of color to his face, 'you don't seem to fancy Miss Beaubien, and—she's a friend of mine, and one I don't like to hear slightingly spoken of, You said a good deal last night that—well, wasn't pleasant to hear '

'I know it, Rollins I beg your pardon I didn't know then that you were more than slightly acquainted with her I'm an old bat and go out very little

"Why didn't you tell me Miss Beaubien was out here last night but some things are pretty clear to my eyes and—don't you be falling in love with Nina Beaubien. That is no match for you

I'm sure you never had a word to say against her father The old colonel was a perfect type of the French gentleman from all I hear

Yes and her mother is as perfect a type of a Chippewa squaw if she is only a half breed and claims to be only a sixteenth Rollins, there's Indian blood enough in Nina Beaubien's little finger to make me afraid of her She is strong as death in love or hate and you must have seen how she hung on her cold sentry word all last winter You must know she is not the girl to be lightly dropped now '

She told me only a day or two ago they were the best of friends and had never been anything else,' said Rollins hotly

Has it gone that far my boy? I had not thought it so bad by any means It's no use talking, with a man who has lost his heart His reason goes with it And Chester turned away

'You don't know anything about it ' was all poor Rollins could think of as a smart thing to shoot after him and it made no more impression than it deserved

As has been said Captain Chester had decided before 7 o clock that but one course lay open to him in the matter as now developed Had Armitage been there he would have had an adviser but there was no other man whose counsel he cared to seek Old Captain Grey was as bitter against Jerrold as Chester himself and with even better reason for he knew well the cause of his little daughter's listless manner and tearful eyes She had been all exuberance and joy at the idea of coming to Sibley and being near the great cities but not one happy day had he seen in her sweet and wistful face since the day of her arrival Wilton too was another captain who disliked Jerrold and Chesters ingrained sense of fair play told him that it was not among the enemies of the young officer that he should now seek advice but that if he had a friend among the older and wiser chiefs in the regiment it was due to him that that elder and wiser head be given a chance to think a little for Jerrold's sake And there was not one among the seniors whom he could call upon As he ran over their names Chester for the first time realized that his colonel at no time not a friend among the captains and senior officers now in only at the fort His indifference to duty his arrogant business manner and self sufficiency had all served to create a feeling against him, and this had been increased by his conduct since coming to Sibley The youngsters still kept up jovial relations with and professed to like him, but among the seniors there were many men who had only a nod for him on meeting Wilton had epitomized the situation by saying he had no use for a musician and poor old Grey had one day scowlingly retorted to him as the professional beauty

In view of all this feeling Chester would gladly have found some man to counsel further delay, but there was none He felt that he must inform the colonel at once of the fact that Mr Jerrold was absent from his quarters at the time of the firing of his belief that it was Jerrold who struck him and sped past the sentry in the dark and of his conviction that the sooner the young officer was called to account for his strange conduct the better As to the episodes of the ladies the lights and the form at the dormer window he meant, for the present at least to lock them in his heart

But he forgot that others too must have heard the shots and that others too would be making inquiries.

The Folly of It

Notwithstanding Colonel Bangs is only a militia colonel and never had a title in his life until a year ago, he does not like to air his colonelcy on all occasions and for some time he has looked with disfavor upon the cards of his wife which read 'Mrs Colonel Bangs The other day she told him to order her some more cards

'Certainly, my dear " he responded for the colonel is as gallant to his wife as most men are to other women but if I do I shall have that 'colonel omitted '

'Oh no she protested 'What do you want to do that for?"

'Because it shouldn't be there

'Why not? It is only a designation of who I am and you are Colonel Bangs aren't you?

'Of course I am '

'Then why am I not Mrs Colonel Bangs?

The colonel bowed

'For the same reason my dear' he responded, that when I was Mr Bangs you were not Mrs Mr Bangs" and the colonel won a victory —Detroit Free Press

Penn Collections

Some of the well to do churches in New York are often bothered with the large penny collections which it takes hours to count and does not amount to much after it is counted Rev Thomas Dixon last Sunday took occasion to call the attention of his congregation in the Twenty third Street Baptist church to the fact that on the previous Sunday it had put into the contribution boxes just 2,000 pennies and that it had taken over two hours to count them He said that his congregation was a fairly representative one of the wealth of the city and that the penny collection was a nuisance The church is supported entirely by collections The next collection showed $200 in dimes and quarters and the penny has fallen into disfavor at the Twenty third Street Baptist church —New York Press

It is the strongest thread made; it is free from knots, kinks, flaws, or ravels; is always uniform in quality, thickness and strength. It never breaks itself or breaks the needle; never puckers the seams or throws the tension out of order. It costs no more than poorer kinds of thread. Ask your dealer for it.

Send 25c. and receive 6 spools of thread (any color or number), together with 4 bobbins for your machine, (really sound) and an instructive book on Carendish sewing, free. Be sure and give the name and number of your machine.

One of Our American Fathers

Neighbor—Now that you hev succeeded in givin' yer sons and daughters a college education, what are yeh goin' to do next?

Mr. Wayback—Wall, I dunno, but I've been thinkin' I'd better move east of town so I won't disgrace 'em.—New York Weekly.

Irony of Fate.

"Why did you never marry, Tom?"

"Well, you see, old man, when I was quite young I resolved I would never marry until I found an ideal woman. After many years I did find her—"

"Well, then?"

"She was looking for an ideal man."—Puck.

An Ohio Mother's Letter.

MANSFIELD, O., March 13, 1893.

I have used Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion for two years and it gives relief to my children when cutting teeth. My child after having the lotion applied a few times would actually cry for it. I have also used Dr. Hand's Colic Cure and Dr. Hand's Cough and Croup Medicine and can recommend them to all mothers."—Mrs. M. A. Ridenow. Dr. Hand's Remedies for children are sold by all druggists for 25c.

Secure.

Mrs. Caudle (in the dead of night)—John, I'm sure there's a burglar at the front door.

Mr. Caudle (sleepily)—That's all right; he can't get in. You know the latch key's in my own pocket.—Truth.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primroy, Campbell county, Tenn. Willie Knew.

Papa—Was Mr. Sandyman here last evening? I looked into the parlor and saw no one but you.

Clara—Why, yes, father, he was there.

Papa—Strange I didn't see him.

Willie—I guess he must have got into the chair first.—Life.

A DAY OF PLEASURE.

A Jolly Crowd of Columbus Grove People Enjoy a Day Here

COLUMBUS GROVE, Aug. 10.—(Special,)—Alfred Smith, D. A. Elwell and Edmond Witteborg, three of Columbus Grove's most prominent young society gentlemen, displayed their spirit of generosity Thursday by most elaborately entertaining at Hoover's lake, near Lima, a jolly crowd of ten of Columbus Grove's most estimable and accomplished fair ones. The ladies who enjoyed these floral decorations of benevolence at the hands of these sterner few were: Misses Lulu Mapel, Maud Chase, Clara Greiner, Mame Eakin, Maggie Eakin, Dora Foltz, Della Roberts and Della Arnold, of Columbus Grove; Della Leuhart and Flo Brown, of Ottawa. They returned at an early hour, all expressing themselves well pleased with their day of superb festivity, and desiring many returns of like pleasure.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles of this remedy for sale by Melville, druggist, postoffice building.

MURDERED BY REQUEST.

An Aged Frenchman, Tired of Life, Hires a Boy to Stab Him to Death.

A strange boy murderer is Francois Bertholher, a lad of 16, who has been tried before the Aix assizes for killing an old man named Blanchard at the latter's request. In the dock he related his crime with grim composure. He said:

"On Friday, Oct. 13 (mark the uncanny day and date), the day before the arrival of the Russians, Blanchard and I went to Toulon. He then spoke to me for the first time of his intention of putting an end to his life. He dwelt on this topic for several hours, telling me about his lamentable physical condition and entreating me to deliver him from his suffering."

"Did you ask him why he hesitated to commit suicide?"

"He told me he could not bring himself to the point and that he had religious scruples. A couple of days later he came into my bedroom and woke me up. He said: 'Francois, I count on you for today. I wish it to be all over by this evening.' I was very astonished. He added: 'I am going to sign a bill for 1,800 francs for you. You may cash it at my notary's at Carpentras.'"

"This sum of 1,800 francs caused you to make up your mind?"

"It did. I bought a sheet of stamped paper and made out the bill, which Blanchard signed. Then we went to Joliette (to Marseilles) to take the steam tramway. Just before starting we went to a cafe, where my friend made me drink glasses of peppermint. He gave me sixpence to buy a knife at a store. In the tramway Blanchard told me to smoke a lot in order to deaden my feelings.

"At L'Estaque we entered another cafe, and I was made to drink four or five absinthes. We went along the highroad, when Blanchard, stopping, said: 'This seems to me the right spot. We shall be very comfortable here.'

"We went under the road bridge. My friend undressed and blindfolded his eyes and stretched himself on the flagstones."

"How many blows did you strike with your knife?"

"Four. On the way he had recommended me to strike several times—to strike at the temples and the jugular vein."

"Indeed you followed out his advice. You struck with a deftness which a professional murderer would envy. Did Blanchard die at once?"

"Yes. He leaned forward a little, heaved a sigh, and that's all."

"What did you do next?"

"I had a little blood on my fingers. I washed them in the sea."

"Did you feel no remorse, no terror?"

"A little, yes."

The jury brought in a verdict of not guilty on the ground that Bertholher had acted without knowledge of crime, but the tribunal ordered that he should be sent to a house of correction until the age of 20.—Paris Journal.

Enlightened the Lawyer.

"I presume, my good fellow, you are a laborer?" said a lawyer to a plainly dressed witness.

"You are right. I am a workman, sir," replied the witness, who was a civil engineer.

"Familiar with the use of the pick, shovel and spade, I presume?"

"To some extent. Those are not the principal implements of my trade though."

"Perhaps you will condescend to enlighten me as to your principal implements?"

"It is hardly worth while. You don't understand their nature or use."

"Probably not," loftily, "but I insist on knowing what they are."

THE DREAMER.

When I am sleeping in my bed,
The little people in my head
All sport and frolic, dance and play
As they never do by day.

They play at being king and queen
Or catching fairy folk unseen.
They set out giant, troll or gnome,
Or in far Afric's forests roam.

They go with Sindbad on his trips
Or take command of pirate ships
And capture galleons of Spain,
Pearl freighted, on the Spanish main.

Yet each one still pretends he's me,
While I am sound asleep, you see.
They play, I run and shout and leap—
And yet I'm lying fast asleep.

They have such jolly lots of fun
And see such sights! Yet never one
Will wake me up that I may go
To share the joys that please them so.

And if I wake and try to hear,
Or at their frolics try to peer,
Then all the sly things in a trice
Are quiet and demure as mice.

BLIND CHILDREN'S IDEAS.

The Queer Notions They Have and How They Express Them.

Dr. Anagnos told me some amusing stories about the quaint old way that blind children usually have of expressing themselves. This is due to the fact that blind children are thrown almost altogether for companionship with grown people and so unconsciously they imbibe the same manner of speech.

A short time ago a little child was entered at the institution by its aunt, who was a schoolteacher. When she left the child, she said, "Now, I shall expect you to get the matron to write a letter for you to me before very long."

A short time passed, and the matron said to the little girl, "Isn't it about time that we wrote that letter to your auntie?" The little mite said, "Now, that is what I should style a coincidence, for I was just about to remark upon the necessity of forming my ideas at once."

At this same institution I was much interested in watching the little ones write. They placed the paper upon a board of raised lines, and guided by them wrote an even, well formed hand. I picked up a composition just finished, and it was so dainty and fanciful that I give it to you:

THE PREACHER.

Do you know who the preacher is, and do you know where he lives? He lives in a green, shady place, and the birds and the flowers make his congregation.

The children passing by often gather bunches of these preachers, for there are a great many, and take them home to put in a vase to ornament their mantels. This preacher is called Jack in the pulpit.

Jack, finding life very dismal, soon dies.

When the cold winds of winter come, Jack is asleep under loving mother earth's warm blanket.

But when Jack hears the rippling brooks and the singing birds he knows that it is spring again, and he must do his part to make mother earth beautiful.—Boston Advertiser

That Tired Feeling

Is a dangerous condition directly due to depleted or impure blood. It should not be allowed to continue, as in its debility the system is especially liable to serious attacks of illness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy for such a condition, and also for that weakness which prevails at the change of season, climate or life.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, carefully prepared from the best ingredients. 25c.

Crazed Engineers.

Insanity is very frequent among railway employees. Two dramatic illustrations can be mentioned. There is living in New Jersey, not far from Philadelphia, a man who for many years was the foremost passenger engineer between New York and Philadelphia on the Pennsylvania railroad. He ran all the specials and best trains, and in 10 years never had an accident. One night in the gloam of the headlight he saw a woman. He had only time to see her hands raised and to hear her cry, and before he could put his hand upon the lever he felt a jerk under the wheels and knew that all was over. Since that night he has never been on an engine. For months he did not sleep and later became practically insane, but only on the one point of seeing and hearing the woman his engine killed. Now he goes about harmlessly and aimlessly, but he has to be kept away from railroads, and in his fretful sleep he awakes with cries and paroxysms of horror. The other case is that of a man who was conductor of a train on the Camden and Amboy, whose train had an accident. He came out all right himself, but it preyed so upon his mind that one night he left his home, and going to the point where the accident occurred threw himself in front of a passing train, receiving injuries from which he died.—Philadelphia Times.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

LITTLE BESSIE'S BICYCLE.

The Diminutive Miss Usually Rides About Fifteen Miles a Day.

Little Miss Bessie Wood of 334 West Thirty-second street, who is 7 years old, has the distinction of being the smallest bicyclist in the city that can do her 10 to 15 miles upon her wheel in one afternoon.

To ride from her home in Thirty-second street to Grant's tomb is Miss Bessie's favorite trip and one that she takes quite frequently. She is able to dodge in among the trucks and circle around the horses with all the ease and sang froid of a grown person.

The wheel that this 7-year-old cyclist rides was built especially for her. Papa Wood had considerable trouble before he was able to get a machine that was satisfactory to Miss Bessie and in accordance with his own ideas. The wheel is like a racing lightweight runner with steel rims.

The steel rims did not give satisfaction at first and wooden rims were used for awhile with poor success, so the steel rims were put back.

Her bicycle suit consists of navy blue bloomers and a pretty braided jacket and cape. One of the troubles of this wee maiden's outings is to get to her wheel, which is kept in Thirty-third street, without letting the public know that she wears bloomers. Her mother puts a dress over her costume until she is ready to mount. When she is in the saddle, Miss Bessie considers her bloomers quite proper and modest.

With her fair complexion, bright blue eyes and wavy brown hair and slight, childish form she makes a pretty picture as she rides her wheel along the boulevard.—New York Herald.

An Apple.

Jerry and Frank were two horses hitched to a yellow car. All the morning they had gone back and forth patiently, with only a rest now and then, but Jerry was beginning to feel rebellious. He was tired, and it was getting hotter every square. Jerry was not by nature such a meek horse as was Frank; but, then, too, he had not been a city car horse as long as Frank had been. Frank knew the only way to do was to go on and on, whether you were tired or not. The driver had it all to say.

By the time Jerry had made up his mind to be stubborn the driver stopped the horses on a switch to wait until the car a square away had passed.

Right there on the curbstone sat a little bootblack. On the pavement lay his tom cup, and he let people go by unnoticed as he rubbed an apple on his jacket to make it shiny. A sweet lady had given it to him, and he was just over his surprise and getting ready to eat it, when he looked up and saw Jerry standing near and looking at the apple longingly with his pitiful eyes.

The little bootblack understood. There was not much time to think—the other car was not far away—but he wondered how he would feel if he was that horse, and quick as a flash he broke the apple in two and put one piece in Jerry's mouth and the other in Frank's. It was delicious.

Jerry forgot about being stubborn as they started on, and Frank forgot his aching bones, while the little ragged bootblack ran away, calling after a man with dusty shoes, "Have a shine, mister?"—Youth's Companion.

The Wasp and the Spider.

Said the Wasp to the Spider, "Let's build us a ship,
With a red maple leaf for a sail.
We'll fasten it right at the front of a chip.
Like mariners bold, we will start on a trip
And weather the heaviest gale."

The Spider agreed, and they both sailed away
For over the seas, in their dory.
But whether they went I really can't say,
For they never were heard of again from that day!
So that is the end of my story.

MARKED ALIKE.

A Weird Story of Two Men Whose Singular Wounds Were the Same.

"I am not a believer in ghosts, reincarnations or the supernatural in any shape, but I had a singular experience some years ago which I have never been able to account for satisfactorily," said J. P. Lacroix of Montreal.

"I was second mate of a merchant ship in 1883. Among the crew was a tough customer named Lander, always in trouble. He had a frightful scar, extending from brow to chin, the result of a dock fight. He had a bullet wound which had taken away the lobe of his right ear, besides a peculiar protuberance like a wen on his forehead, I would take my oath there was not another man alive marked just like him. At the end of that voyage Lander killed his wife and cut his own throat. He severed the windpipe, but he recovered. The wound in his throat healed, but left a hole, which he had to cover with his hand when he spoke. He breathed through a silver tube. He was tried and convicted, and happening to be in port I was present at the hanging and saw the body buried.

"In 1890 I was on the gold coast of Africa. Ashore one day I came across a man bossing a gang of negro laborers. His form seemed strangely familiar, and I started with surprise when I saw him place his hand over his throat when giving some orders. Going closer, I saw the scar, the wen, the lobeless ear, the hole in the throat, the silver tube and every feature and characteristic of a man I saw hanged and buried. I got into conversation with him. He said his name was Danler. He was unable to tell how he came by the wound in his throat, ear and face. He said he must have had a long illness. He remembered being in a hospital, he said, but it was like a dream, and he had no recollection of his life before that.

"He said he remembered, while still ill, taking a long voyage—he didn't know where from—until he had landed where I met him. He told me my face looked like one he had seen in a dream, but he knew he had never seen me before. How do I account for it? I don't try to. I am only telling the facts. I don't know whether Danler was Lander come to life again or a reincarnation of him. Maybe Lander's neck was not broken and some scientific chap had been experimenting on him with a battery. All I know is that no two men could possibly be marked in exactly the same way. If it was Lander, he was greatly benefited by the change, as on inquiry I found that he bore a splendid reputation as a quiet, law abiding, peaceable citizen."—Chicago Times.

FAMILY HANDWRITING.

Experts Say All of a Generation Have the Same Characteristics.

Experts in handwriting say that all the people of a single generation write alike, and it is well known that most French handwriting has a strong family likeness to the eyes of others than Frenchmen. Nearly all Chinamen of the washhouse class look alike to superficial observers, and persons unaccustomed to colored persons find difficulty in distinguishing one from another.

It needs, however, a comparison of two or three family photograph albums of 20 or 30 years ago to convince men and women of today that there are striking superficial likenesses running through Americans of a given generation. All these old albums show curious resemblances, chiefly perhaps of dress and face, but sufficiently striking for one family album at first glance to be taken for another. As page after page of each is turned over there is the same succession of men, women and children in full figure, sitting, standing, posed in groups of two or three, with hats, without hats, draped in shawls, and manifestly dressed in their best for the occasion.

The photographers of those days chose, for reasons of their own, to make full length pictures, and as they were unusually small costume counted for a great deal and helped to intensify the general likeness running the whole generation.—Philadelphia Press.

Carnot and Jean Carries.

The death of Jean Carries, the sculptor, recalls an anecdote in which he and the late President Carnot were the principal actors. The artist's busts and figures at the Champ de Mars excited the admiration of all, and they were deservedly classed in the first rank. M. Carnot, when on his visit to the salon, noticed an old man, who seemed much moved on seeing him, standing before the works of art of the sculptor. Some one said to the president, after pointing out the artist: "Here is need for reparation, M. le President. Carries is one of our most skillful men of art, and he is not yet decorated." Forthwith M. Carnot detached from the buttonhole of one of the officers of the military household in the place of a cross of the chevalier a cross of an officer of the Legion of Honor and placed it himself on the breast of Jean Carries. The next day, in The Officiel, the artist was named a chevalier of the order.—London Figaro.

WATER WELLS.

Two Already Completed and a Third Almost Finished.

It is Thought the Question of a Good Water Supply has been Solved.

The question of a water supply for Lima has been one of the most puzzling the water works trustees have had to wrestle with since the completion of the works. The number of services has grown from five hundred to sixteen hundred in the past six years, and the daily consumption of water at the present time is a million and a quarter gallons, and the source of supply being from the surface, there is no way of adding to it during a drouth such as Lima is experiencing at present, and has at this time of the year for several seasons past. The trustees resorted to pumping water from the creek and other means to tide them over the dry spell, and it was only good luck that prevented the supply being completely exhausted.

The building of additional reservoirs has been agitated as one means of overcoming the trouble, but objection was made owing to the great expense and still have nothing except surface water. The TIMES-DEMOCRAT long ago suggested that the drilling of water wells be experimented with, and cited the instance of the flowing well at the Paper Mills another on the Wollett farm and another on the Osborn farm, east of the city. Both the latter are four or five years old and are still as good as when drilled. The Paper Mill well is several years old and seems to have and in a drouth is as strong as in wet weather.

As the only solution to the question of furnishing Lima with a good supply of water without going to the great expense of building reservoirs, two water wells have been completed, a third nearly so, and yesterday the pump was attached and a four inch stream of clear, solid water, has been pouring into the conduit line at Lost Creek reservoir. The wells are located on the city's property south of Lost Creek reservoir. The first was completed in May, the second in July and the third will be finished in a few days. The first well is one hundred and eighteen feet deep. At this depth a fine flow of water was struck and it has flowed a solid stream constantly since then through a three inch pipe. In the second well a vein of water was struck at the same depth and it was drilled to a depth of one hundred and fifty feet as an experiment, to see if the flow could be increased, but it was not. Well No. 2 was equally as strong as the first well, the output being increased if anything in the first well when the second was finished, indicating that they are in sympathy. The wells are about 2,500 feet from the conduit line and it was decided to lay an eight inch line from the wells to the conduit, direct from the wells into the line and thence into the big reservoirs so there would be no danger from contamination as would be the case should the water be allowed to run over the ground into Lost Creek and then into the conduit. This was done, the line being completed yesterday.

SO THE WATER WOULD PASS

The pump used is the Duplex with a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons per twenty-four hours, and is the same one that was used in pumping water from the creek last summer. The pump has had the effect of lowering the water in the wells about eighteen feet where it remains and has not dropped below that point. This is the way the other wells act and when they reach a certain point they remain stationary nowithstanding any hard draft made upon them. As much water is now being pumped from the wells in twenty-four hours as was pumped from the creek in the same length of time when Lima was successfully tided over the drouth last year, and there is no comparison as regards purity. The well which was struck about eighteen feet down, and has a sulphur taste. It is also slightly impregnated with iron. In the case of the creek water no one can dispute that it was impregnated with everything filthy and unhealthful. The pump was started yesterday morning and when a TIMES-DEMOCRAT representative visited the wells, trustee Cross, who has been a strong advocate of the well system, was found highly elated over the showing the wells were making. The wells, flowing as they did for a month or so before they being coupled up and put to pumping, is an indication that there is an inexhaustible supply. They are located on the lowest portion of the land so as to reach the water level as soon as possible.

Trustee Coss said yesterday that he had heard of a movement being put under headway to make an effort to stop the trustees pumping the water into the reservoirs because the State Board of Health had not been consulted, but he says he has no fears from that source, because they have had the water tested and it is all right. It might, however, be four-fifths filth and still be better than the stuff that has been emptied from the creek into the reservoirs. The wells are cased down to the rock and cost $2 a foot.

The supply of water to-day was as great as when the pump was started yesterday morning and there seems no doubt but that the question of Lima's water supply, and good pure water at that, has been solved.

BASE BALL NOTES.

The management of the Findlay club was very much surprised to read in yesterday morning's Republican the story sent out from Lima as to the important part the Findlay club was to take in the formation of the Ohio League of Amateur clubs. The gentlemen interested claimed they never authorized anyone to speak for them in the matter and they have never been in favor of joining any league. The Findlay club has earned by hard work and good ball playing an enviable reputation and would gain nothing by joining the proposed league. It has beaten about all the clubs mentioned for membership in the proposed league and is much stronger than any of them. The schedule was arranged so as to make the Findlay champions a star in the weaker cities and to help support the weaker clubs. The Republican is authorized to say that the Findlay club will finish the present season with the same method of procedure that has made it a success thus far. At the same time Findlay offers no objections to her neighbors forming the league if they see an advantage in it.—Findlay Republican.

The Lima boys were not only shut out at Delaware in yesterday's game, but allowed the home club to pile up ten runs. Lima secured only three hits.

The Delaware Herald says of the first game:

The Lima team is justly celebrated for first class ball playing, and yet they only beat us by a score of 4 to 3, and that by a scratch. Our team was demoralized, not a fielder being in position. But for a couple of errors in the early part of the game, and a wild throw by Nops, in right field, to Breen, on third, we would yet have won the game.

ROBBED BY TRAMPS.

Two Tourists Held up by Five Others Last Night.

Two Suspects Arrested, but the Others Made Their Escape.

About 10:30 o'clock last night, two tourists, giving their names as Frank Beymer, of Cambridge, O., and Frank Kost, of Braddick, Pa., were walking along the P., F. W. & C. tracks near the tool shed, a short distance east of the freight house, when they were held up and robbed by five others, some of whom held guns in their faces, while their pockwere searched and the contents taken.

Beymer claims to be a railroad man who has for the past four years been in the Black Hills, where he lost his position, and was on his way to Canton, where he has a married sister. Kost is a boy about seventeen years of age, and states that he left his home in Braddick, Pa., a week ago Thursday and went to Ft. Wayne. He started to return home and yesterday morning got with Beymer. They were in this city nearly all day yesterday and were talking at the depot with the five tramps who afterwards robbed them.

Last night an east bound freight stopped across Main street and Beymer and Kost started down down along the train in search of an empty car. Beymer walked some distance ahead of Kost, and when near the tool shanty, two men stopped the latter and while one of the men held a revolver in the boy's face, the other searched him. Beymer did not find an empty car and started back toward the depot. One of the men left Kost in charge of the other and joined three other tramps, who halted Beymer, and after relieved him of $12.50 and a $45 gold watch. Kast was robbed of $1.50. The two victims were forced to climb onto the train, which had started eastward. Arriving at the depot platform they saw Policeman Roney, and alighting from the train they told him what had occurred. Roney caught sight of one of the robbers on the train and captured him. He landed his prisoner safely at the police station, and Lehman and Marks being notified, started in search of the remainder of the gang. They overhauled them in the west end of the yards and attempted to land the whole gang. Lehman got one fellow who threw away a revolver, silver watch, knife and some old coins when he found he was captured. He resisted arrest and Marks, who had the other three in charge left them and assisted Lehman, whereupon the other three started to run. Several shots were fired but the trio escaped. Lehman's prisoner was landed and several of the police hunted several hours for the three that had escaped but did not find them.

Beymer and Kost identified the two that were captured, one of them as the man who robbed Kost and the other helped to touch Beymer. This morning the switching crew in the P. Ft. W. & C. yards found the stuff that had been thrown away by the man whom Lehman arrested. The old coins were identified by Kost as some of those taken from him.

The two prisoners gave their names as Alfred Smelter and Richard Wilder. The latter carries a brick masons card issued at Mansfield, O., The police have notified the stations along the P. Ft. W. & C. to look out for the three men that escaped, and furnished a description of them given by the two victims.

Beymer and Kost will be held here for the present as witnesses against the prisoners.

There was a gang of half a dozen tramps about town all day yesterday, visiting business houses and private residences begging, and they no doubt are the ones implicated in the affair. It seems strange that the authorities should allow them to hang about town as they do, awaiting an opportunity to rob or commit other depredations.

WILKINSON HERE.

Head of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen

Is in the City Investigating a Grievance Against the L. E. & W.

S. E. Wilkinson, of Galesburg, Ills., the executive officer of the B. of R. T. arrived in the city last evening and put up at the Lima House. Mr. Wiskinson is here, as the chief officer of the B. of R. T., to investigate a grievance against the L. E. & W., and for that purpose met with the officers of the local organization, and will leave for Indianapolis to-night where he will meet with General Manager Bradbury to-morrow and present the case to him.

Several months ago Conductor Chas. Heider, while in charge of an L. E. & W. freight train, had an accident at Portland, a cut of cars being dropped into a siding, and in some manner a car loaded with poultry was badly wrecked. When they arrived at the end of the division Heider and the engineer who had charge of the engine, were both laid off pending an investigation, which when held resulted in both Heiter and the neer being laid off.

THE ENGINEER WAS REINSTATED.

When the engineer was reinstated Heider's friends endeavored to have the company reinstate him also, and upon two occasions grievance committees were sent by the local B. of R. T. to Indianapolis where they conferred with the officials, asking that Heider be reinstated, but the officials have so far refused to accede to their requests. At present Heider is employed as a switchman in the C. & E. yards here.

The B. of R. T. claim it is only justice to man and man that Heider be reinstated now that the engineer has been put back to work, and hope to succeed. The company's refusal to reinstate Heider may lead to trouble, but on this point the B. of R. T. refuse to talk. They claim it is only justice to Heider to replace him, and hope the railway people may see it in the same light.

WAS A RESIDENT OF LIMA

years ago. He was quite young at the time. His parents lived where the Thompson block now stands, in the northwest part of the square, his father being a photographer and his mother conducting a millinary establishment. The family removed to Urbana, Ills., about forty years ago, where his father was killed. Mr. Wilkinson has been in the railroad service all his life and lives in Galesberg, Ills., where he has an interesting family.

WON FIRST PRIZE.

Jimmie Heffner Does Some Good Racing at Defiance.

Jimmie Heffner and Harry Ashton returned from Defiance this afternoon, where they participated yesterday in several bicycle races against Cleveland, Toledo and other wheelmen. Heffner won first in one one third of a mile dash and second in another, and Ashton finished third in each.

Heffner also went in the sixteen mile road race and was a good winner until the scratch was neared. He did not know the exact place of finishing and as he approached the wind up, he saw a crowd collect at a point on the course, where a fellow was standing waving a flag. Jimmie who was in the lead made a good spurt and increased his lead, easing up when when he passed what he thought was the winning point. Ashton yelled at him to go on, but two riders had passed him. Jimmie made another spurt and passed one of the riders and was within a length of the other when they crossed the tape. The time was fifty-three minutes.

The boys speak well of their treatment, but the prizes were very much inferior to what were given away here in the Decoration Day road race.

Third fall won by Walker in 2 minutes and 15 seconds. Fourth fall won by Walker in 1 minute and 3 seconds, Walker being an easy winner. After the second bout it was plain to see that Walker was much stronger and more muscular than his antagonist, although Whitmor displayed fully as much activity.
